Those who attended the concert last Tuesday night in the College Chapel realized that Miss Myrtle Redford, the pianist, was the daughter of Mr. Nick Redford, of Ashland, who formerly made his home here. Miss Redford is considered one of Dr. Mason's finest students of the piano, and her playing attracted the most pronounced attention in New York city. She is considered by many the finest pianist in Virginia.

Her playing at the concert here drew most appreciable applause on account of her exquisite execution. Miss Redford was probably able to play a piano better than any in the city.

The rehearsal of the Ashland auxiliary of the Richmond Wednesday Club of Haydn's Seasons, which was given at the University of the Washington and Lee Club, was a great success. The rehearsal was in chorus singing. These rehearsals thus far have been given by Mr. Jones, secretary of the Wednesday Club, and much interest is shown in the undertaking. Over ninety members of Hayden's last work has already begun to be appreciated.

VIRGINIANS TO BUILD NEW ROAD

Project to Operate Extensive Electric Traction System in Long Island.

FISHER HEAD OF COMPANY

Number of Prominent People From This Section Said to be Interested.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NEW YORK, November 25.—Virginians are largely interested in a project to build and operate an extensive electric traction system in Long Island.

Primarily concerned in the company, the South Shore Traction Company, which has been incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, with a capital stock of $2,000,000, is George E. Fisher, who is president of the company, and Charles Hill Davis, of Petersburg.

The company has already been granted a certificate of necessity of route by the board of railroad commissioners. The line will run in an easterly direction from the Greater New York line through the county of Nassau and part of the county of Suffolk.

The entire length of the system will be about fifty-one miles. The route will be through a territory which is expected to increase in population rapidly because of the additional facilities which will be given by the proposed tunnels and bridges connecting Manhattan and Long Island. The line will be built from the Connecticut River through Brook Haven, Bellport, Hagerman, Patchogue, Bluepoint, Bayport, Sayville, Oakdale, Great River, Islip, Bayshore, Babylon, Lindenhurst, Copague, Amityville, Massena, Babylon, Wantagh, Bellmore, Merrick, Freeport, Baldwin, Rockville Center, Lynbrook and Valley Stream, to Central Avenue and the Greater New York line.

The company has secured perpetual franchises from the town authorities of Brook Haven, Islip, Babylon and Oyster Bay, and has also obtained franchises from the villages of Patchogue and Amityville. The franchise from the village of Patchogue being perpetual, while that granted by the village of Amityville is for twenty-five years, with the privilege of renewal for another twenty-five years.

While it is true that most of the villages through which the proposed road will run are small, they are located very close together, being considerably less than two miles apart on the average. This means a scattered village population, desirable and profitable from a railway standpoint.

As about half of the proposed road will be on private right of way, a schedule speed of fifteen miles an hour is possible. The central power plant, which will be 3,000 kilowatts capacity, will be built. Construction work on the system will be commenced either late this fall or early next spring.

McCLURE'S MAGAZINE

The Christmas McClure's contains the story of the New York sweat-shops by Ray Stannard Baker

entitled "THE RISE OF THE TAILORS" in Mr. Baker's article. You go along step by step—interested marvelously in the unfolding of a dramatic story, and seeing and perfectly understanding as you proceed, just why things were as they were, just why they came to be as they are.

Mr. Baker has nothing to tell but what happened. He interests and informs by the whole story of a single case. He has nothing to prove, nobody to protect, nothing to keep back.

The pathetic, tragic story of the great East Side strike in New York involving over fifty thousand people, mostly Russian Jews. The waste of human life in the struggle for existence in crowded tenements. A wonderful history of the labor union among these people. You start at the beginning

"I work, work, work without end, Why and for whom I know not, I care not, I ask not. I am a machine!" —Yiddish Sweat-shop Song.

At present there are four and a half times as many murders and homicides in the United States as there were in 1881," says the Editor of McClure's Magazine in a startling article in the December number, based on facts and corroborated by eminent judges and journalists.

Here are some of the sub-headings: Present day anarchy.

Stewart Edward White's "Rawhide," Part II, is a compelling romance of the Southwest. A page in color by Maxfield Parrish.

James Hopper, the American Kipling, contributes an exquisitely tender and sympathetic sketch of a little French lad to the Christmas McClure's. "A Jumble in Quilites" is a Christmas story that will bring smiles and tears.

Rez E. Beach's most powerful story is "The Test"—two men fighting famine and blizzard and endless distance in the Arctic Circle. Brown or brains. Which wins? Picture in color by F. E. Schooner.

George Madden Martin's story is a beautiful picture of a real home with real people in it on the night before Christmas; and a good love story.

JOHN LA FARGE contributes a splendid article on the Standard Oil Company. With the masterpieces beautifully reproduced in color.

Samuel Hopkins Adams, a new member of the McClure staff, edits "Notes from a Trainer's Book." A dozen animal stories in one. Ten pictures in tint by Oliver Herford.

O. Henry, the author of "Cabbages and Kings," is a new humorist. His "Ransom of Mack" in the Christmas McClure's is full of funny touches.

Marion Hill's story is "His Journey to the Gates"—the gates of heaven. When scapier lever enters the house, the Mother's Club go out. A touching little story. Ten drawings in color by F. Y. Cory.

Other stories by Herman Knickerbocker Vliet and Janet Remington.
